When you put the helmet in your trunk, and remove it from the trunk and put it on the seat, do you feel the vibration from the seat?Q: Vue.js v-model as a table row I have a form and I'd like to be able to associate a certain type of data with the form elements based on how they're generated in the form. So for example, there's a search form where, given an input text field, I'd like to pull out the search by' data from the row that's generated. Then if I'm to add a dropdown menu, I'd like to be able to specify that this dropdown is the search by' data from the table row. This way when the user edits the form, the data I've associated with the table row appears. I have no idea what the best way to approach this is and I'd appreciate some insight. A: You're thinking about this in the wrong way. A table row is a display object that represents a specific row in your data. An input is a data
